Creating a resilient community

from crisis to stability

When you support United Way of Northwest Georgia, you help families navigate some of the most difficult moments of their lives, often in ways that are unseen but deeply felt.

Through partnerships with agencies like the Northwest Georgia Family Crisis Center, United Way helps ensure that when someone reaches out for help, a system is ready to respond. That network of support made possible by donors, volunteers, and community partners does more than meet immediate needs. It creates a path forward.

One woman arrived at the shelter after fleeing a domestic violence situation with nowhere else to turn. She was separated from her children, navigating an open DFCS case, and facing an overwhelming uncertainty about what would come next. In that moment, stability felt out of reach.

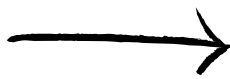

But because support was available when she needed it most, her story did not end there.

With the help of the shelter and United Way, she found employment, received counseling and case management, and gained access to transportation and safe housing. Step by step, she began to rebuild not only her circumstances, but her confidence and her future. Today, she has regained custody of her four children, restored relationships with her family, and created a stable, hopeful life.

“That’s the power of this work, and it’s only possible because people choose to give and support United Way.”

Your investment makes moments like this possible, ensuring that when families are in crisis, they are met with immediate support, sustained care, and the opportunity to rebuild.
