From Receiving Help to Giving Back.

Sometimes the people most passionate about giving back are the ones who once needed help themselves. Meet Paula Glover: a longtime supporter of United Way of Northwest Georgia and employee at Shaw Industries whose connection to United Way began during one of the hardest seasons of her life.

When Paula turned to United Way for help in 1994, she found more than support – she found hope and people who showed up when she needed them most. That experience stayed with her. Today, Paula gives back so that other families can experience the same encouragement and stability.

“United Way changed my life, and that’s why I continue to support it today.” – Paula Glover
