

Juan & Jesus

Juan never expected to become a full-time caregiver. At just 26, he was working as a truck driver for Mohawk Industries, focused on building his future. But when his older brother, Jesus, suddenly needed full-time care, everything changed.

Overnight, Juan became more than a brother—he became a caregiver, advocate, and provider. Long days on the road were followed by long nights at home. Every day became a balancing act between earning a living and caring for his brother, and like so many caregivers, Juan began to realize something might have to give.

That's where United Way of Northwest Georgia stepped in.

Before long-term solutions like insurance could be put in place, Juan needed help immediately. Through United Way-funded support, Jesus was able to attend RossWoods Adult Day Services—giving him a safe, engaging place to go during the day while his brother continued pursuing his career with Mohawk Industries.

United Way became the bridge—ensuring care wasn't delayed when it mattered most.

“As much as I want to be there for my brother every minute, I also have to provide for us. RossWoods gives me peace of mind knowing he's safe while I'm at work.”

Because of this support, Juan doesn't have to choose between his job and his brother's care. Because of you, he doesn't have to face this moment alone. Juan can continue working and caring for his brother.

Your investment makes it possible to respond immediately when families are in crisis—bridging gaps, stabilizing households, and ensuring care is there when it's needed most.
